

Girls on the Rise: Black Women in the Suffrage Movement & the Future of Voting

Tuesday, Oct. 13 2020 | 5 p.m.
Hosted virtually
by Seattle Central College

The future of voting & untold stories of Black suffragettes

As the first in Seattle Central's social justice focused speaker series, we are pleased to invite you to a screening and discussion. Just two weeks before a historic election, this event will reflect on the role of Black women in the voting rights movement, and how their struggle reflects current threats to our democracy.

Girls on the Rise: Panel & Discussion on Black Women in the Suffrage Movement
Tuesday, Oct. 13, 5 to 6:30 p.m. | Hosted virtually by Seattle Central College

In partnership with the Washington Women's Commission, this event is free and open to the public. Pre-registration is required to receive a virtual link to the event.

Evening at a glance:

- Welcome from college president Dr. Sheila Edwards Lange
- Screening of short documentary & conversation: The Untold Stories of Black Women in the Suffrage Movement

Conversation hosted by:

- KD Hall, President & CEO, KD Hall Foundation
- Sara Bukair, Seattle Central College student body Executive of Legislative Affairs

Panelists include Women's Commissioners:

- Anita Crawford Willis, Seattle Municipal Court Judge
- Regina Malveaux, Director of Washington State Women's Commission
- Michelle Merriweather, President & CEO of the Urban League of Seattle
- Justice G. Helen Whitener, Washington State Supreme Court

Join the conversation on Oct.13!

Share our Facebook event with your networks

RSVP via Eventbrite (must RSVP to receive link to virtual event)

About the Central to Community Arts & Lecture Series: As a beacon for lifelong learning, Seattle Central believes education is a practice of liberation. The Central to Community Arts and Lecture Series features thought-provoking artists, speakers, and activists to enrich the intellectual and cultural life of our community, and to advance equity and social justice.